

Washington Post March 20, 1961

CPYRGHT

Director for National Estimates
Central Intelligence Agency.
His unique role in the development of the Central Intelligence Agency and of intelligence as a professor displays an impressive grasp of world affairs. Through his important work, he wields a strong influence on all aspects of CIA activity.

FOIAb3b

CPYRGHT

"My warmest and most cordial congratulations to the 10 recipients of the National Civil Service League Awards. Public recognition of outstanding careers, such as theirs, builds interest in public service on the part of the gifted young people needed for Government careers now and for the future. This kind of recognition likewise encourages all those engaged in Government work to strive for the hallmark of excellence so urgently required by the problems that face us in our own country and the world.

The achievements of these men and women emphasize the significant contribution of the Federal career services in meeting the program demands of Government agencies. May their service be an example for other servants and American citizens."

John W. Macy, Jr.

John W. Macy, Jr., Chairman,
U. S. Civil Service Commission.

P.S. A salute to these award winners who will be presented with a Career Service Award Certificate at a dinner tomorrow at the Sheraton-Park. The Honorable Luther H. Hodges, Secretary of Commerce, will be the principal speaker, and the U. S. Marine Band will provide entertainment. Master of Ceremonies for the evening will be Mr. Theodore F. Koop, Washington Director, News and Public Affairs for CBS.